Note and Comment.

The bye-election in Quebec County made necessary by the retirement of Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick to the Supreme Court has resulted in the defeat of the regular liberal nominee, Mr Aymot, by a majority of about 800, his successful opponent, Mr Robitaille, running as an Independent. It doesn't seem to pay for the Liberals to place members of the "Manufacturers' Association in the field as their candidates. No one could subscribe to the policy of that organization and remain true to the party's traditions and to the low tariff ideas for which a large number of Liberals say that it still stands. Mr Aymot is the vice-president of the Manufacturers for Quebec. Mr Grothe, who lost Maisonneuve to the party a few months ago, was also a high protectionist manufacturer. These two contests therefore, cannot afford much encouragement to that wing of Sir Wilfred Laurier's followers, who want him to draw still further away from the fiscal principles laid down in 1893.

The Quebec bye-election serves to indicate, as well, that the dissensions in the party organization in that province are beginning to tell on its effectiveness as a fighting force, and that despite the magnetism of the Premier of the Dominion, it will not be possible for him and his associates to make again the sweep in Quebec that they did in 1900 and 1904. In Ontario, as was pointed out in a recent issue, Liberalism is making absolutely no progress. In Nova Scotia, where there was not a single Conservative elected in 1904, the opponents of the government are by no means dormant and a stirring contest is now afoot in Queen's and Shelburne, where Hon. Mr Fielding

WHY NOT?

FRANCE (to Russia)—Aren't you going to dance with Mr Bull?

RUSSIA—I think I should rather like to, if he wouldn't tread on my toes.

FRANCE—Oh, but he won't. He's improved immensely. I find him adorable!

The renewal of the rumors of an Anglo-Russian understanding, in connection with which it has been announced, though later denied, that Princess Patricia of Connaught is to marry the Czar's brother, serves to recall this one of the most finished and pointed cartoons Sully Sulmboure ever contributed to Punch.

was unseated. Dr Weldon, his opponent, is one of the ablest Conservatives that has ever held a seat in the Commons and would be a source of great strength to Mr. Borden, if elected. This is hardly likely to happen, however, and if his success should result in Mr Fielding's disappearance from Dominion politics, too big a price would be paid to have him in the House. Mr. Fielding is undoubtedly the ablest of Sir Wilfrid's lieutenants as well as his natural successor and his retirement would be a great misfortune.

One cannot help admiring the pluck with which the Conservatives of Nova Scotia are jumping into this fight, in the face of such tremendous disadvantages. Their friends in the other provinces should profit by their example. Those in Alberta are it is said, considering the advisability of letting Gleichen go by default. If they do so, it will be a clear case of shirking their duty. The constituency is a very close one, so that they should have an excellent fighting chance, while there is the greatest need for a man of ability in the legislature to take the leadership of the party forces. Unless they do get such a man before long, the likelihood is that the Government will when the next general contest comes on win quite as overwhelming a victory as it did last November.

"Not a crime to steal votes" is the heading which the Winnipeg Telegram places over an editorial article dealing with the decision of the fall court, sitting at Regina, in the case of Sinclair, the returning officer accused of conspiring to stuff the ballot boxes in the Prince Albert election. "His acquittal" says the Telegram, "emphasizes the awful degeneration into which Canadian justice, as related to election trials has fallen." No responsible journal should use the language of the Telegram's article. It is strictly in keeping with the attacks made upon the judges of Manitoba in the legislature of that province last winter by Hon. Robert Rogers. The decision at Regina was, it should be remembered, a unanimous one, so that if what the Telegram says is correct, all the judges in these two provinces are men willing to make themselves the tools of the party in power. What do those who know these judges themselves think of the inference? Granted that Sinclair was guilty, is it the first time that a man has gone free on a technicality? If the law fell down in his case, all that there is to do is to arrange it so that others cannot escape as he has done. That is the business of the members of our legislatures. All that the judges can do is to interpret the statutes according to the methods that have been agreed upon after generations of experience. This habit of denouncing the members of the judiciary every time that a decision of theirs has a political effect not to the liking of a certain brand of partyism is an exceedingly dangerous one and a newspaper or political leader resorting to it should immediately forfeit public confidence.

A delegation of the Strathcona Board of Trade waited upon the council of that town the other day to ask what progress was being made towards securing traffic facilities on the high level bridge and an improved telephone system. Mayor Sheppard's reply was that the council had been trying in vain all summer long to secure a conference with the Edmonton authorities in regard to these matters and that no definite action could be taken till this conference were obtained. The situation is a remarkable one. Here are two municipalities situated so closely together that there is talk of their ultimate incorporation as one, yet their representatives cannot get together to discuss matters of the greatest moment to both. It must mean one of two things. Either those to whom the overtures are being made are grossly negligent of their duties or, for reasons which they do not care to disclose, they are anxious to avoid taking up the matters which it is proposed to have the two councils confer over. If they do not want a traffic deck on the high level bridge, why do they not come out and oppose it openly? The whole trouble, so far as the Saturday News can size it up, is that while no one can fail to recognize that the project is in the ultimate interests of Edmonton even more than in those of Strathcona, many of our civic representatives have individual property interests which they fear will be adversely affected, if the two towns are brought closely into touch. A state of affairs is thus created which is very inimical to the best interests of the municipality.

The council has done well to notify the Strathcona Radial Tramway Co. that it does not deem it advisable to part with a street railway franchise to a private corporation. With proper management a municipal line could be made a profitable undertaking in a short period after completion, if the growth of the city is in anything like the ratio that is expected. It is becoming an absolute necessity and no time should be lost in getting the project under way.

The report of the Commissioners adverse to the project of widening of Namayo Avenue north of Rat Creek to 116 feet was referred back to them at the last meeting of the council with instructions to go on with the purchase of the property necessary to carry it out. The council's action was a wise one. In a few years a great deal of traffic must necessarily concentrate on this thoroughfare and it is much easier and less expensive matter to provide for it now than later. With the growth that is in prospect in the next few years. No short sighted policy in matters such as this will do.

A whirlwind election campaign is in progress in New York state. H. W. Hearst is elected governor, there is little doubt that he will be the Democratic candidate for the presidency two years hence. Backed as he is by his family millions, and the power of his yellow journals, he is by all odds the most dangerous demagogue that ever appealed to the American electorate. With all the revelations that the last year or so has brought about regarding corruption in high financial circles, with the feeling that exists against the trusts and their operations, the time is particularly opportune for his attempt at range "the common people" against "the plutocrats." Fortunately he has against him the man who perhaps has accomplished more than any other single individual in throwing light upon the conditions which have led to this popular discontent. Mr. Chas. E. Hughes, the counsel for the state in the insurance investigations. No abler or more high-minded man has come before the public in recent years. Mr. Hearst's talk about the tax-dodging corporations and the soulless trusts has been met by the definite proof that the stock of his own papers is held by a corporation known as the Star Publishing Co., which is exactly analogous to the Northern Securities Co. It has enabled him not only to escape the payment of all taxes but has made him immune from all libel suits, so that he can go on and take away other people's reputations without thought of the consequences. If he succeeds in his appeal to the lowest of political passions, we shall have a campaign in 1908 based on class hatred in comparison with which that of 1896 will appear as a very mild affair.

The report of D. B. Dowling of the Geological Survey on the coal resources of the Rockies north of the C.P.R. main line, which was given out at Ottawa last week, contains information of the greatest importance to the northern part of the province. He was commissioned to trace the coal formations that had been mined so successfully at Cammore and Bankhead, as far north as possible. He has now traced them past the Brazeau river. The maps of that part of the province are very inaccurate but the point that he has reached is evidently about opposite Lacombe. His report is well worth quoting in full:

"The coal basins of the Rocky Mountains are as a rule not in continuous strips, but depend on the foldings of the mountains and these occasionally are interrupted. The Cascade basin has been traced to within 14 miles of the Saskatchewan. Between the Red River and the Clearwater a section of the measures gives 21 seams, of which 15 are over 4 1/2 feet in thickness, and the workable coal amounts to 95 feet. Between the Saskatchewan and the Brazeau rivers an outer range of mountains, called the Bighorn range, brings up the coal measures again, and on the south side of the Saskatchewan is what may be called the foothills. These coal measures reach the surface and are exposed in a small ravine rising to the river opposite the limestone range. In this locality three seams were discovered in what is evidently the top of the formations and one seam is of workable thickness, the upper two being about 2 feet only. The larger seam has 5 feet of good, clean coal overlaid by shale about 5 feet thick, above which is three feet of good coal. This seam may possibly, when worked, run into a thick seam as the shale bands often are traceable into first dirty coal and then clean coal and the reverse. On the north side of the river the measures are lifted much higher and the coal measures underlie at no great depth all the interval between the Bighorn range and the main Rockies. In this the Bighorn river cuts through and exposes a great number of seams, but most of these are crusted and very dirty.

"The best exposures, however, were found further north on streams breaking through the Bighorn range in the vicinity of the Brazeau river. There the seams observed on the Saskatchewan were also found, but it was with a good deal of satisfaction that a 16-foot seam was unearthed. The coals have not been analyzed as yet, but the trials in an open fire show that they are not a true anthracite as they burn with a luminous flame, with some smoke and coke. They may be roughly classed as steam coals of a grade between the bituminous coals of Fernie and the anthracite coal of Cammore and should be of excellent value for the railway use. The coals are found again on the north side of the Brazeau and as the formations are continuous, they occur on the latter stream, though the mantle of river deposit and drift conceal them from the casual observer. Our efforts are necessarily limited to the earlier exposures, owing to limited time and laborers."

"That these formations continue further north there is every reason to believe, probably along the whole length of our territory. It is needless to point out what all this will mean to the future of Alberta. It means that we have more varied resources than those possessed by any other part of the Dominion.

Where are there to be found such agricultural possibilities along side of all that goes to build up great manufacturing industries? Nature could not have done more for us. All that is needed is the application of brains and capital to make Alberta the most populous and wealthy of the sisterhood of provinces.

W. L. Bailey, of Colbourne, Ont., is negotiating with the Strathcona municipal authorities with a view to establishing a soap factory here.

H. Hastings, the representative of eastern capital, is anxious to secure an electric street railway franchise in Medicine Hat. He wishes it extended over thirty years. After ten per cent. has been paid on the capital stock, he proposes that the profits should be divided equally between the stockholders and the city.

The Waterous Engine Company has purchased a corner lot in Vermilion from Harry Bowtell for $1500, at a rate of $50 a front foot. Vermilion only sprang into existence a year ago this autumn.

Already word comes from different quarters of parties starting out to spy out the land along the G.T.P. route. George Sellars and A. McDonald left Ponoka last week. They proceeded forty miles to the north of Camrose and then along the river.

W. H. Doty will open up a business and confectionery factory in Medicine Hat in the course of a few weeks.

The Wetaskiwin Post reports that the C.N.R. has purchased a portion of R. N. McCarter's property in that city and takes it to indicate that Wetaskiwin will soon have a competing railway.

Major Belcher has purchased the Bank of Commerce' building in Lethbridge from Messrs. Cherry and Madill for $7,700.

Mr. Clouston's statement that too many branch banks have been opened in the west has led to the publication of a table showing the increases in the number of branches of the various institutions since 1900. The Bank of Commerce has been the most active, the increase being from 48 to 152, that of the Merchants from 63 to 111, the Union from 42 to 120, the Montreal itself from 49 to 95, the Nova Scotia from 23 to 53, the Toronto from 16 to 61, the Molsons from 38 to 61, the Dominion from 20 to 49, the Imperial from 27 to 59, the Bank of Hamilton from 31 to 98, the Traders from 22 to 59. The Northern, which began business last year, has 37.

However, despite these increases, there are some parts of the West which think they deserve better banking service. The Magrath Pioneer, for instance, is urging the local Board of Trade to take steps to secure a chartered bank.

O. R. Rowley, inspector of the Bank of British North America, was in Edmonton the other day, but explicitly stated that his visit has nothing to do with any plans for the establishment of a branch here.

By the end of the month Edmonton's building record will probably reach the million and a quarter mark, and before the end of the year, at the present rate of increase, it will be close to the two million.

Real estate in Edmonton is more active at present than it has been for some time and several large deals have been negotiated during the past week. The 37 foot lot occupied by C. W. Campbell, the baker and the Western Realty Co., opposite the Saturday News office, sold for $20,000, while the lot on Jasper west between Second and Third Streets where Grainger's real estate office stands was sold to R. McIntosh, formerly of McIntosh & Campbell at the rate of $654.25 a front foot. Following so closely upon the purchase of the Henderson building for $900 a front foot, these deals serve to justify those who have all along held that, even the prices asked for residential property are open to criticism, there must be a constant increase in those to be obtained on the business streets.

An Athabasca Landing correspondent states that the Bank of Montreal is to open up there shortly.

The Vermilion Signal says: "W. A. S. Colter, district towns agent of the C.N.R., spent Monday in town on business for the company. Considerable town property is changing hands at present and the demand for Vermilion town lots is steadily growing. Mr Colter's visits will therefore become more frequent in future than they have been, although he is by no means a stranger here."

HOME AND SOCIETY.

One of the prettiest of this autumn's teas claimed Mrs. Sydney Woods as hostess on Wednesday afternoon. Again the weather-man disgraced himself, but the fair "tea" devotees of Edmonton are brave beyond any weather-man's pleasure, and no one looking at the smart frocks and fashionable chapeaux would dream they had been donned in the face of the danger of their destruction.

The pretty rooms in the little house "just over the hill" looked very cheery as one entered, and Mrs. Woods looked genuinely charming with beautifully coiffed hair and an exquisite robe of Russian lace over pink taffeta with pink chiffon over-skirt. The bodice was smartly fashioned with a bolero jacket of lace, over a pink chiffon vest, high taffeta girdle, and neck of hand embroidered lace.

Miss Woods, her fair assistant, was a graceful figure in a lovely gown of ecru chiffon cologne, the skirt trimmed with rose point lace panels and accordion pleatings of the material. The bodice was extremely smart being trimmed with Persian embroidery with touches of gold and pink velvet, wide ruffles of accordion pleatings falling over the shoulder, with the daintiest of lace yoke. The gown was made over a foundation of rose taffeta, and became Miss Wood's fragile style and fair hair to a nicety.

In the tea-room the table with its highly polished surface, priceless old china, and centre of white tulie, encircled by huge bows of golden brown satin ribbon, holding a silver pot of delicate ferns, with smaller pots at the four corners, was the cynosure of all eyes.

Mrs. H. C. Wilson poured the coffee, Mrs. Almon, tea, Mrs. Pardee served the ice, and Mrs. Swaisland the Roman Punch, while Mrs. Scott, Mrs. Balmer Watt, and Miss Abby Sommerville assisted. Miss Worsley, who was to have been present, was prevented by her brother's serious illness. Many kindly thoughts went the way of the invalid and one is hoping that the fine weather will bring better news.

Those who were invited to this jolly tea, included: Mrs. Mowat, Mrs. Thibaudan, Miss Gascoigne, Mrs. Scott, Mrs. Norquay, Mrs. Campbell, Mrs. Charlesworth, Mrs. Saunders, Misses Fielders, Mrs. Gray, Mrs. C. May, Mrs. R. Mays, Mrs. Le Maistre, Mrs. Hyndman, Mrs. Nightingale, Mrs. Slocock,

Thursday, Thanksgiving, was a great day for the golfers and their friends, quite everyone "golfy" in the least degree, strolling down to the Links, whose great beauty impresses one more and more with each succeeding view of them.

Those who didn't play, and they were few and far between, took luncheon at the club house, where a most substantial repast of salads and tempting cold meats, and all sorts of dainties were keenly relished after the invigorating sport, and the glorious keen air.

On Saturday Mrs. Woods and Mrs. Duncan Smith gave the customary "tea," which was splendidly patronized and much enjoyed.

Though the weather man was in his most sulky mood on Friday and behaved himself quite abominably, "society" donned its fine feathers in quite saucy fashion and braving His Weather's wrath, sallied forth in large numbers to welcome back the gracious mistress of Government House, Mrs. Bulvey.

Perhaps the contrast between conditions outside and the cheery, cosy rooms, with their sweet fragrance and pretty decorations emphasized the cordiality of one's greeting, but Mrs. Bulvey never appeared to greater advantage, and gave everyone such a sweet welcome, and looked so well in a handsome gown of English eyelet embroidery, over a foundation of white taffeta with petticoats of white mauve chiffon. The bodice was beautifully arranged with exquisite lace and trimmings of ruffles of lace.

In the tea-room, done with pink roses, Mrs. Donald Macdonald and her sister, Miss Kerr, assisted in doing the honors, while someone presided at the pianito in fine form, adding not a little to the enjoyment of the afternoon.

Mrs. Dr. Ferris is home again, after spending a delightful holiday with relatives in the east.

Picking up the Illustrated Sporting and Dramatic News the other day I came across the portrait of a fine-looking young fellow named Hugh R. N. Cobbett, under which the following paragraph appeared: "This young cricketer, who was taught the game at Worcester grammar school, has for a youth of nineteen summers, just acquired no little distinction with the willow in far away British Columbia. Playing for Victoria in August against a team selected from the outside clubs, he was the chief instrument with a faultless innings of 152, of gaining for his team the championship of the Pacific North-west. On being caught out at 152, he was carried shoulder high to the pavilion with much cheering. This was his third century within the week and it is thought that his inclusion in the Canadian International team of 1907 is assured."

Cobbett is the only son of Dr. C. N. Cobbett, of Edmonton. The love for athletics evidently runs strong in the Cobbett blood. The only game to which the father now devotes himself is golf and Edmonton has never had a finer exponent of the royal sport.

Golf has flourished this season in the two Albertan cities as never before. Both Edmonton and Calgary have links of which both cities have reason to be proud. The Calgary president, Mr. A. O. Levers, has been most indefatigable in his efforts to place the club on a good basis and much of the credit is due to him. Another year it is to be hoped that matches will be arranged between the two cities. With players like Cobbett and Simpson on the one side and H. L. Downey, C. W. Hogue and George Ross on the other, first-class contests should result. In golf, as in every other game, there has to be competition outside the club to arouse interest to the fullest extent.

The expense of laying out the new Edmonton links has been such that a deficit of some $650 has now to be faced. A general meeting has been called at the Prince Arthur Cafe for the evening of Nov. 7th to consider ways and means.

R. A. Darker, of Calgary, the other day received a letter from H. R. Herchner, president of the Fernie district game protective association. In this letter Mr. Herchner says that "we are now protecting a number of elk at the head waters of the Elk river, which are the sole survivors of a great number of animals which roamed over the western portion of Alberta and the eastern portion of this province some twenty or thirty years ago."

He also referred to the Stoney Indians as follows: "Our greatest trouble is with the Indians, and particularly with the Stoney Indians, which belong to your province, and who should not be allowed to leave Alberta for the purpose of hunting in our province. For the past two years we have prevailed upon our government to pay specials to watch over and keep them out, but we think they slipped in on us for all that."

In concluding he said: "I hope that you will be successful in forming an association in your province, and hope that in the future our associations will be able to work in harmony with one another and to the mutual interest of both provinces so as to protect the big game."

Mr. Darker deserves the support of all true sportsmen throughout the province in his efforts. Such an association has come to be an absolute necessity, if Alberta is to continue to possess the attractions which it has had in the past for those to whom this branch of sport appeals.

The Capitals of Ottawa are lacrosse champions once more, defeating the Toronto Tecumsehs last Saturday in the finals by 10-2. However much the national game has languished in other parts of the country, it has always remained to the fore in the Capital of the Dominion and the city continues to turn out generation after generation of as fine sportsmen as are to be found anywhere. Many of them, it is true, develop into professionals but they are practically all Ottawa products. The Capital never needs to import its lacrosse or hockey or football players. Taking it all in all, Ottawa can rightly claim to be the best sporting town in Canada.

The Caps intend to take a trip to England shortly. While the games there will not be worth paying any great attention to, the Old Land possessing no clubs which are for a moment to be considered in a class with the leading Canadian teams, they will serve a useful purpose in popularizing lacrosse and in serving to bring the Dominion more prominently before the public.

Lethbridge has agreed to join the western Canada baseball league and the only town now needed to complete the six-club circuit is Moosejaw. The athletic association, which is in a flourishing financial condition owing to the advance in value of its grounds, will take the game up in Lethbridge. The final organization meeting will be held in that city on November 5th. Medicine Hat expects to have Sproer, the well-known Winnipeg pitcher, manage its team.

The Winnipeg Telegram's enterprise in sending Marsh to compete in the Herald road race in Hamilton should do much to encourage distance running in the city and province. Marsh was a good second to Longboat, the 100 to 1 shot Indian, who surprised everyone by coming in within a few seconds of the record time for the course.

The recent day of sports held by the pupils of Strathcona schools passed off most successfully, some splendid contests being held. Lloyd Flemming won the senior championship with 19 points out of a possible 25 and Harold Newman, the junior, with 18 out of 25.

THE NEWS
PUBLISHING CO.,
PUBLISHERS.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 27, 1906.

The Saturday News is the only paper in Edmonton which publishes its circulation returns and which invites advertisers to examine its mailing lists and its returns of street and newsstand sales, in order that they may satisfy themselves as to the correctness of the figures which appear weekly at the head of this column.

Even in the days when its number of bona fide subscribers was small, its management established this practice, believing that by taking those from whom it solicited business fully into its confidence and giving them the opportunity of seeing its circulation grow, it would be serving its own interests.

The Saturday News was first issued on December 23, 1905.

Last week 1530 papers were distributed to bona fide subscribers.

Not less than 1700 papers are each week printed and circulated, and it is safe to say that each issue is read by at least 5000 persons. Nor is it a paper that they pick up, glance over and cast lightly aside. It is carefully perused from cover to cover, a fact which more than doubles its value as an advertising medium.

Note and Comment.

Mr D. D. Mann of the Canadian Northern made a statement the other day regarding the Fowler letter, read before the Insurance Commission: "The information to Mr. Fowler, M.P.," says Mr Mann, "was neither secret or confidential. It was given to him just in the same way as it was given to others, with the view of settling the lands along the line of our railway. The same information was given to everyone who asked for it. A great many people enquired about the location of the Canadian Northern and in every case it was given to them."

There is a straight clash between Mr Mann's and Mr Fowler's assertions. The latter wrote that Mr Mann "met us at the train and took us to his office and gave us the route so far located; of course under the cover of the strictest secrecy." It is clear that when Mr Fowler sought this information, it had not been made public property. If it had been, he and his associates could not have reaped the great advantage from it that they did. Surely Mr Mann does not expect us to believe that at that stage he would have given anyone who asked for them, the particulars regarding the C.N.R. route.

Those who have been interested in learning where a railway line was likely to run and have made many frantic but unsuccessful efforts to secure the information from those who were known to have it in their possession will regard the C.N.R. president as something of a humorist. The routes of some of the C.N.R. lines to the West and North have undoubtedly been quite as fully determined at the present time as that of the main line was when Mr. Fowler interviewed Mr Mann. What answer would an interested party receive from the Vice-President, should he write to him now, seeking information regarding the route of these lines, in order that he might help in "settling the lands" along them?

Each year of western growth serves to complicate the problems arising out of the influx of people of other races than our own. The Oriental question on the coast has entered on a new phase this summer by the arrival of large numbers of Hindus. The fact that the Motherland was in alliance with Japan made it impossible to exclude the Japs. But these newcomers are like ourselves subjects of the King. What becomes of Imperial unity if they are told they must stay in India? Across the border, the foreigners who have proven themselves the most undesirable of immigrants are the Italians. They show little tendency to assimilate with the rest of the population and criminal instincts are developed to such a remarkable extent among them that in the large centres extraordinary measures have had to be taken. With the growth of large industrial communities we are bound to have trouble with them in Canada. It has already begun, it seems, in Southern Alberta. An Italian friendly society had a gathering at Lille, near Frank the other day. A carpenter became involved in a slight altercation over a bar with one of King Victor Emmanuel's subjects and was stabbed, it is feared mortally. The manager of the hotel declined to permit the holiday-makers to hold a ball on his premises and later found several sticks of dynamite underneath his place of business, evidently laid there by the disappointed ones. In Frank itself an Italian attempted to free a fellow-countryman who was being taken to the lock-up by hurling a rock at the constable.

At Cochrane a week or so before, the lives of two young men were for a time despaired of as a result of the liberal use of the knife on the part of a band of Italian laborers who had become engaged in a street row. The situation is one that the authorities would do well to give close attention too.

In connection with the Hindu question, a recent despatch from Tokio should be noted, in which we are told that the anti-British movement in India is receiving much encouragement from Japan where every effort is being made to foster a feeling of kinship between the two dark races and to preach the lessons of the Russo-Japanese war. The Buddhists of the two countries are fraternizing and exchanging visits and steps are being taken to encourage the coming of Hindu students into Japan, where they will be surrounded by an atmosphere of disaffection. The Hindu students now in Tokio, have just published an address in which they appeal to India to heed the call of "Asia for the Asiatics," and to rise and cast off the British yoke. Taking advantage of this Anglo-phobe foment certain merchants of Japan have sent a mission to India to endeavor to supplant the boycotted British merchandise with Japanese goods. The efforts are meeting with a warm welcome. No wonder with so many Asiatic problems on their hands, the Imperial authorities look askance at the agitation going on in British Columbia. There are other than Imperial considerations to pay attention to as well. In Alberta we are looking for a great development of Oriental trade within the next few years to add much to the wealth of this province? Is it in our interests to encourage any movement which will widen the breach between Canada and these Asiatic countries? A policy of exclusion on our part will certainly be followed by Oriental retaliation all along the line.

The work of fencing the Elk Park to the south-east of Fort Saskatchewan, set aside by the Dominion government for the preservation of the elk, which have been roaming about that part of the country, is proceeding rapidly. The project is due, it will be remembered, for the most part to the enterprise of F. A. Walker, M.P.P. for Victoria district. The lake, that is a feature of the reservation, is a very beautiful one, several miles long and dotted with islands and the park will be a most popular resort.

Steel is now laid on the C.P.R.'s short Winnipeg-Edmonton line as far as Hardisty, 105 miles east of Wetaskiwin, on the Battle river. Traffic, it is expected, will shortly be opened to that point.

"THE NORTH-WEST—CANADA."

Oh would ye hear, and would ye hear
Of the windy, wide North-West?
Faith! 'tis a land as green as the sea,
That rolls as far and rolls as free,
With drifts of flowers, so many there be,
Where the cattle roam and rest.

Oh could ye see, and could ye see
The great gold skies so clear,
The rivers that race through the pine-shade dark,
The mountainous snows that take no
mark,
Sunlit and high on the Rockies stark,
So far they seem, as near.

Then could ye feel, and could ye feel
How fresh is a Western night?
Where the long land-breezes rise and pass
And sigh in the rustling prairie grass, When the dark-blue skies are clear as glass,
And the same old stars are bright.

But could ye know, and for ever know
The world of the young North-West?
A word she breathes to the true and bold,
A word unknown to the false and cold,
A word that never was spoken or sold,
But the one that knows is blest.

"They" sat in front of me at Monday's concert and they were obviously from "a piece out" in the country.

It was written all over him from his carefully slicked down hair, home laundered collar, and the cut of his coat. And I knew it from her, because she wore a big red necklace, which she trifled with lovingly to assure herself that she hadn't lost it, her cap, long since out-of-date in the popular fancy, and her whole-souled enthusiasm for the experience of the evening.
You see in the city it is proper to feign a little distrust air if you fancy the affair in hand. To do so stamps you as superior, you know, and rawther interesting.
"She" was neither, she was just what her appearance indicated an unspoiled country lassie, out for a good time, and a treat. "Ain't it grand" she murmured, as the gentlemen of the Glee Party, concluded "Come away, pretty maiden." "I could listen to them all night." "It is pretty fair,"
from Him. "Do sing rawther well, don't they?"

I had known it from the start, he was from the old land and not given to falling into raptures.

How she howled and nudged him, when Mr. Iveney did his humorous sketch and even he was moved to joining in the merriment. How she revelled in "Oh the darlings!"
"the wee pets, but shouldn't they be in bed," times out of number, as the boys sang their Mother-Goose melodies and joined in the glees.

But it remained for that winsome little George Putnam to put the last drop in her cup of enjoyment.
"Love was once a little boy" warbled the high sweet treble voice; the girl sat very still but a trifle nearer the man. And he just sat and devoured her enjoyment with all his heart in his eyes.
"Love was once a young man" rang on the words of the song. It found them motionless. And then we learned that Love had grown an old man, and last of all might die.

"Never" came the tense whisper from the seat ahead. "Never by a jugful."

And he gripped the girl's hand, and held it lovingly and unashamed while the programme concluded and the crowd rose to "God save the King."

Then they went out into the night, he to hitch up the horse, the two of them later, as being a woman I know, to plan for a brand new roof-tree, way out on the prairies, where it being the land of young hopes and great promise, they will realize as we older folk have. "Love never dies" but lives on and on, growing ever younger and more precious as the years slip gently by.

I was rather amused on Monday evening at Mr. Harry Iveney's broad bold strokes in his depiction of "gossip" "as she" spoke "by women at an afternoon tea."

Wasn't it only last week an article appeared in these columns having to do with that very subject, and didn't I then reiterate that gossip and tea, contrary to all manish belief, do not go hand in hand.

Women are constantly accused of being illogical because they have the courage to strike out on an original tack and seize upon the crux of the matter at issue, while the man is content to follow along time-worn lines. I suppose personally I lay myself open to the same old charge when I insist that if tea unlooses women's tongues, what may not be said of the afternoon bracer, of His Serene would-be-critic, at the club and other places?

If you read your newspapers you will constantly find cases cited where the Lords of Creation are continually getting themselves, their business, and their political parties, into serious difficulties because they grew too confidential over the flowing bowl.

Gossip may or may not have far-reaching results, but as a general thing tea-room gossip—from the fact that so many are listening, precludes any serious charges being made, while on the other hand strictly confidential "chats" revelled in by men generally, have been demonstrated time over and again to carry in their train very far-reaching and serious effects.

From time immemorial men have twitted us about our follies and foibles, but to be serious, how really naturally Mr. Iveney took to "imparting" his news, you could almost imagine, couldn't you, that he had played the game himself, at one of our teas?

The hag is astride
This night for to ride,
The Devil and shee together,
Through thick and through thin,
Now out and then in,
Though ne'er so foul the weather.

spells, and quaint carousings—fear-chestnuts, and time-out-of-mind games!

How the very sound of the word Hallowe'en brings them all to mind! And the strange part of it is that the years would seem to make little difference in our observance of the day.

Ages and ages ago pretty girls walked backwards down dark cellar stairs on the awesome night that they might meet with the shadow of their future husbands on the turn at the bottom; in almost pre-historic times, the Druids lit huge fires on the fatal eve, and the country people came, each with a stone, and placed them in a circle round the embers. If in the morning any of these were found displaced, those who had put them there were said to be doomed to die within the year; and in matter-of-fact to-day we still eat our apples before the looking-glass, gazing long and steadfastly that we may discern "his" features who is to some day fill the all-important position of "the only one."

So, between tales of superstitions, terror, to a certain eeriness the night, never fails to enkindle, Hallowe'en has become to the timorous a good night to stay within doors after twilight falls, for then it is that fairies are about and witches have more than their wonted power to charm. "Things that are not right" scare belated travellers on lonely roads. The Prince of the Powers of the Air is abroad with all manner of tricky and evil things in his train.

Some of these eerie things are very old and therefore very wise. And so on these nights of witchery, if one knows white magic and practises it with a valiant heart, one can compel the elves to tell what they know and thus read the future, ensure good luck for the year, recover stolen property, or ascertain what manner of person one's husband or wife shall be.

For Hallowe'en is the one night in the year when all elfland is astray. The fairy hills are open, and over the moonlit fields floats the music of elfin horns. The witches, too, hold high carnival with their master, the devil himself. They ride to their meeting-place on broomsticks, on he goats or on the tails of magpies. After the fall of dusk on the witching eve the fairies will steal a newly married bride, if they can catch her abroad and alone. At this time too there is peculiar danger of the evil eye.

We can well imagine that the last night of October, to people in more credulous times was to many a long wakeful terror, when the heart stood still at every stealthy or unaccountable noise. But time and the hour ran through the most fearsome night at last. So, after the Devil himself, with a rabble of witches rushing behind him, had gone by on the winds of dawn; after the crowing of the cock had caused the last evil thing to hurry to its lair and cover there, the first shafts of November sunlight falling across a dewy world, would be to these dear simple folk, the most welcome sight on earth; the maids would fluster about their duties with a new jauntness for had they not seen "his" face, was not the fearsome night a thing of the past, while the master of the house would hurry out, a brave man once more, to see that his cow had not been bewitched and the milk pilfered by the "good little people."

A little scheme for a Hallowe'en frolic, in which the uncanny but ever fascinating witch plays the leading role, may be worked out as follows: the idea I have taken from a bright young girl who wrote of it in an old magazine:—

From a sheet of black paper cut a large figure of a witch, with a cat just in front of her, mounted on a broomstick. Have this figure pinned to the centre of a sheet, which is to hang at one end of the room. Have written on slips of paper (as many as there are guests) some clever fortunes, in rhyme, and place them in small envelopes. Pin these promiscuously over the sheet, placing those promising the brightest future nearest the witch. When all is ready let each guest in turn be blindfolded, turned about several times, and allowed to seek and find his fortune by touching the sheet with the end of a small broomstick. The envelope nearest the point he touches will be his.

Do not remove the envelopes until everybody has finished, but pin each one's name (written on a slip of paper) to the spot where he touches the sheet, to keep tally. The fortunes may be made more desirable as souvenirs by decorating the papers with small silhouettes of witches, black cats,

Rev. A. S. White of Port Vermilion arrived in Edmonton last Friday.

Thomas Kelly has returned to Edmonton after spending the summer in the North.

Norman Chamberlain, nephew of Joseph Chamberlain, and John Murray, son and heir of the great London publisher, are making a tour through the Canadian west. Mr Chamberlain's mother is a daughter of the late Colonel Arthur Williams of Port Hope, Ont., who met his death during the North-West rebellion of 1885.

Dr. F. W. Crang of Strathcona has his father and mother from Toronto as his guests.

The editor of the Farm and Ranch Review makes this report on the condition of the winter wheat crop of the province: "There never was, at this season of the year in Alberta, a better outlook for a heavy crop of winter wheat than there is this fall. After making personal investigation we are extremely pleased to notice that more care has been given the seed bed preparation, and that on the whole sowing has been earlier."

The people of Lloydminster seized the occasion of the visit of Hon. Mr. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture of Saskatchewan, to their town at the time of the annual fair to urge the establishment of an experimental farm at that point, Lloydminster being on the boundary line of Alberta and Saskatchewan, the fair was honored by the presence of the Ministers of Agriculture of both provinces.

The outlook at the time of writing is excellent for a successful gathering of the agriculturists of the province at Lacombe, on Friday and the indications are that one strong organization will be formed.

Mr O. Bush at the last meeting of the Strathcona branch of the Alberta Farmers' Association suggested that the Government should be petitioned to appoint a grain inspector, who would live either in Edmonton or Strathcona.

A correspondent of the Lacombe Advertiser, who signs himself "Striving," discusses the ever-present cattle question in the last issue. The last portion of his letter is well worth reproducing:

"The cattle growers," he writes "have been victimized for years and will go on being done until they do as a rancher on Sullivan lake has just done. He was offered $98 per head for long threes and declined 'The generous offer.' Ye gods! Took steers to Winnipeg and got $44 net per head, cows as well. If any one likes to watch the reports of the cattle market at Winnipeg they will see that western cattle always bring a good price, better than is paid here. Just as long as the cattle men are willing to be fleeced they will always find firms to do it for them. Last fall cattle were sent from eastern Alberta to Liverpool which realized $52 per head after commission and freight were paid. Never until you bring your power to bear in some way or another will the beef producer better his position. Why did the 'pure bred' men not join and send the animals on to Winnipeg? They would have saved money by doing so. Just because they have no confidence in one another, hence Burns & Co.'s chance. This sort of thing goes to show that the enlightenment of the twentieth century is having no effect so far on the hayseed."

Hon. Frank Oliver at the opening of the new quarters of the Calgary Liberal Club made an important reference to the relations of rancher and farmer, defining as it did very clearly the policy of his department in dealing with them.

At one time, he pointed out, the south was regarded as a ranching country. Now it is demonstrated that it is a grain country. There was a wide margin between an acre of wheat and an acre of grass. It was the intention of the department that every acre should be made as productive as possible. It was inevitable that there should be a conflict of interest between the rancher and the grain grower, and there is no help for it. It was not possible to draw a straight line and say that on this side is ranching and on that side is grain land. The department is anxious that every acre of grass shall be turned into beef, and just as anxious that every acre possible shall be turned into grain.

"The department," Mr. Oliver concluded, "cannot give the rancher everything he wants even though sometimes he gives good reasons for it. The object of the department is to give the rancher the preference where there is grass and the preference to the farmer where grain can be grown."

CITY MESSENGER SERVICE

Up till a few months ago on one of the streets leading off Jasper avenue there was a lumber yard. In front of it were placed some massive pieces of timber on which some lines were inscribed which could not fail to attract the passer-by. If he were a lover of good poetry, he was apt to re-read them each time that his course lay along that street. For myself, I am free to admit that I often went out of my way in order to do so, and I feel as if my walks in that direction are much less enjoyable since with the wonderful business growth that the city has undergone, store fronts now stand in the place of the timber. The verses were entitled "The Voice of the Pines" and the last of them ran:

"Our voice is eternal, our song sublime,
Its theme is the days of yore,
Back thousands of years of misty time,

When we first grew old and hoar."

They were taken from Charles Mair's "Tecumseh" and I often wondered why it was that a man, who was possessed of his gifts, and who had rendered the Dominion such useful service in such a variety of ways, was not more generally honored by his countrymen. How many schoolchildren are there who even know his name? Surely with the growth of Canadian sentiment, such men as he will receive their due. He is no longer young and does not write poetry to the extent that he once did, but he is rendering useful public service still as immigration agent down at Lethbridge. The other day he visited Edmonton to interview the Minister of the Interior on a departmental matter. Few know western Canada as well as he does, for he came out here in the sixties and has stayed by the country ever since.

The Lacombe Advertiser adds its contribution to the province's fund of journalistic good will, which has been the subject of some consideration in this column of late, by making a personal attack on the editor of the Medicine Hat News. His reception to the delegates to the press convention in the gas city was, the Advertiser declared, so frosty that his conferees have rechristened him "Froster." The charge is one which the ordinary person would hesitate to make in a public print, no matter what his feelings were. What hope is there for a provincial press association under the circumstances? Imagine how strong the spirit of fraternalism must well in the bosom of the Medicine Hat editor-mayor when he reads the Advertiser's article and how much disposed he would be to attend future conventions? This question of giving visitors a good time is frequently a difficult one to solve. Some journalists who attend press conventions do not think they are enjoying themselves if they are outside of a bar-room door more than a very small fraction of their stay. Others instinctively avoid the man whom they suspect of an intention to ask them to have a drink. Some hosts can give the glad hand to perfection. To others it is an impossibility and they only make themselves ridiculous when they attempt to. In any case, it is the very poorest kind of form for a guest invigil in public against the treatment he has received and the man who does so stamps himself as unworthy of showing any kind of attention to.

When Mr. B. E. Walker, the general manager of the Bank of Commerce was in Edmonton, he made the statement that this city would be in his opinion "one at least the second great centre of the West. When he was in Calgary, the people there understood him to say that for no city in Western Canada did the future hold greater things. Then he went on to Vancouver and strange to say, his hearers at that point took away exactly the same impression that those in Edmonton and Calgary did. The World reports him as saying that "British Columbia was the greatest province, which would materially aid in the upbuilding of Canada." This doesn't sound like Mr. Walker. For one thing he is not in the habit of using any but polished phrases and this could be hardly so described. Besides, the statement doesn't tally with what he said in Edmonton about our great northern hinterland. Perhaps however, even so big a man as he, is apt to succumb to the desire to tickle the ears of his hearers to such an extent that his speeches in the course of a trans-continental trip, do not hang well together.

If brevity is the soul of wit, long-windedness can be properly described as the most prolific source of ill-humor. The Winnipeg Telegram the other day had an article on William Whyte of the C.P.R. in which we were told he disposed of visitors in short, order when he so desired. Many a business man will wish he had the same art. But it must be remembered that a man like William Whyte can do some things which those whose position in the business world is not so secure, cannot afford to. We have all of us wished we could meet more people in our ordinary intercourse like the woman who delighted the heart of Dr. Abernethy, the famous Scotch surgeon, a man of few words himself, who couldn't tolerate the garrulous individual. This particular woman called at his office in Edinburgh one day and showed a hand badly

The next day the woman called again and the dialogue was as follows:

Two days later the woman made another call, and this conversation occurred:

The Frank Paper contains the following item:

"Thomas Steele left during the week for Edmonton. He will endeavor to obtain a livelihood from the public after the manner often followed by persons wholly incapacitated from all manner of work."

As Edmonton grows, we may expect it to be to an ever increasing extent the Mecca for people of this class. Why should its citizens be burdened with the incapacities of the rest of Alberta? The province should make provision for them.

A friend of mine after attending one of the stirring melodramas at new opera house the other night, broke out as follows when he reached home:

The play was touching, and the tears rolled down each face, I looked, but failed to see a tearless optic in the place:

But though dry eyes were absent, still I'm quite prepared to swear Between the acts there seemed to dry throats in plenty there.

The Prince Arthur Cafe

That Edmonton has developed from a lone trading post into a thoroughly modern city in a marvellously short space of time is a fact which the reading public the world over is now familiar. But the visitor to the Albertan capital is hardly prepared for the evidences of progress which he meets on every hand after arrival. To take one instance, it is easy to imagine his surprise when he is told that the city possesses a cafe, which has not an equal in Canada west of Toronto. To the casual reader that may seem an exaggeration. But after once visiting the Prince Arthur, he will be free to admit that it is not. The views which are presented of the interior on this page give some idea of the high-class character of the establishment, but it is necessary to pay a visit to it yourself to appreciate on what a splendid scale the proprietors have carried out their plans. Messrs Shaw and and possibly more will be added very shortly. The service is excellent and nothing is wanting that the most exacting would look for.

An immense stock of the finest silverware and other requisites for catering on a large scale have been laid in and the proprietors are prepared to handle the very largest of functions. As an example of the way in which they are able to attend to work of this character, reference can be made to the elaborate banquet held in honor of the delegates to the Associated Boards of Trade in the Thistle Rink last June and to that tendered Hon. Frank Oliver by the Liberals of the city and province a few weeks ago.

The cafe itself is particularly well suited for the holding of social gatherings of all descriptions. It has already been the scene of one of the most notable dances in Edmonton's social history. On

All in all, the Messrs. Shaw & Layet are deserving of the warmest congratulations on the success which has attended their efforts to provide a cafe to which the citizens of Edmonton could point with pride. The Prince Arthur is already filling a large place in the life of the capital, and with the years of deveyment that lie before the city and the country, its name should rapidly become a familiar one the continent over.

by her brother-in-law, Mr. Douglas Clark, wore a smart travelling suit of navy blue broadcloth, with hat to match, and grey ostrich feather bon. His Grace was attended by his eldest son, Godfrey Matheson.

The ceremony was a very quiet one, the only persons present being Miss Adele Matheson, Miss Maude Matheson, Mrs. Fortin, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Clarke, Miss Edna Talbot, Mrs. Munson, Miss Brunsterman and Mr. and Mrs. Strathy.

After the ceremony His Grace the Archbishop and Mrs. Matheson left for the west and will spend a few days in Qu'Appelle, returning to Winnipeg on Monday.

The Hockey Club Ball given in Pincher Creek on Oct. 5, was from all accounts a most successful affair the receipts being over and above the expenses entailed.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. McKinnell, of Ponoka, entertained on Friday evening at a jolly card party, Mrs. McKinnell being assisted in entertaining by her sister-in-law, Miss G. McKinnell and Miss Annie Campbell. Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Lee, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fairley, Mrs. Knapp, Mrs. T. J. West, E. A. Fox, C. C. Reed, Dan Campbell and Geo. Gordon.

Miss Cushing, daughter of the Hon. Mr. Cushing, Minister of Public Works, who recently underwent an operation for appendicitis in Victoria, B.C., has returned to Calgary, accompanied by Miss Cameron, but is still very weak. The doctor announces that it will be some time before she will be able to be around again.

Edmonton hospitality has come to be a by-word throughout the West, but I doubt if anyone actually realizes how continuously we are kept employed doing teas and dances and various other functions, until he or she sits down to write to absent friends the happenings of the week. Then it is that one sits up with a start and exclaims, however did I do it all; for after all there are only seven days to a week and there are other things in the world to occupy one's time besides "social doings."

One of the smartest events of the past week was Mr. W. E. Lines' dinner party on Monday evening, for Miss Gascoigne, who leaves for Montreal and how we regret to say it, on Saturday.

The dinner took place in the "Rose" room of the Prince Arthur Cafe, which was beautifully decorated with many stately palms and lovely cut flowers for the happy occasion.

The table in particular was most artistically done, the snowy cloth being centered by an epergne of Bohemian glass, resting on a bed of smilax and rich red grapes. The color scheme was carried out in pink and white, the quantities of exquisite carnations intermixed with fairy-like fern being all in these pretty tones, while pink satin streamers fell in graceful lines from the tall centre ornament. At each place was an exquisite knot of white chrysanthemums and maiden-fenn, with the exception of the guest of honor's, her favor being an exquisite shower bouquet of white roses.

Those who had the pleasure of being invited to the recherche dinner were Mr. and Mrs. deBlois Thibideau, Miss Gascoigne, Dr. and Mrs. Dunsmuir Smith and Mr. Bowker.

Mrs. Thibideau is having a little "farewell" tea on Friday for her sister.

Mrs. H. C. Wilson left on Thursday for Toronto where she will be present at the wedding of her sister, Miss Violet Lee to Mr. Harold Mara on November the first. Miss Lee has frequently visited Mrs. Wilson and has a host of good friends in Edmonton who will wish her all happiness and good fortune in her married life. I believe the wedding is to take place as the residence of the bride's sister, Mrs. Crowther of St. George Street.

"Let Witches and Wizards all turn out,
To find out what it is all about,
At half past eight, you'll meet your fate,
At the Prince Arthur Cafe, so don't be late."

So run the mysterious words of a Hallow E'en invitation, which were received on Thursday by many wondering witches and wizards from an unknown source.

The invitations are printed on black paper in pumpkin coloured ink, and they came in a real pumpkin colored envelope and have the most impish of imps at the top of the card.

And now everyone is wondering what its all going to be; personally I have heard it whispered that there will be Caves of Mystery, and any number of spookish things, but no one seems able to speak with any authority in the matter.

At Rennie's Academy a Masquerade Ball will be held on the same evening, when prizes are I believe, to be awarded the best costumed lady and man. Mrs Manuel will also entertain on the mystic night at a young people's dance, for her young son, Mr. Larry.

On Monday evening a bumper house greeted the Westminster Choir at Cameron's new theatre, and throughout the evening I noted quite a number of jolly little parties who seemed enjoying the programme to the utmost. Among others, Mr and Mrs Donald W. Macdonald, Mr. Ketchum and Miss Kerr, Mrs N. D. Beck, the Misses Beck and Mr Charles Beck, Mr and Mrs Scoble, with Mr and Mrs McPherson, Mrs Edmiston and Mrs Frith with Mrs Cameron and little Miss Cameron, Miss Grace Robertson and Mr. Lane, Mr and Mrs Barford and Miss Lynch, and many others.

From various criticisms I have heard since, it is almost impossible to form a public opinion as to whether the people were pleased or otherwise with the performance; one point nearly all the would-be critics seem to share in common, is that while the talent of the company was beyond dispute, their selections were not at all acceptable to the majority of the audience.

Those who dropped in at Ramsay's on Thanksgiving Day, (and there were scores who did), were well repaid their tramp by a sight of such splendid greenhouse production as has never been seen before in Edmonton.

The five spacious new green-houses are models of their kind, and the immense area they cover is one mass of exquisite roses, and carnations and every other species of exquisite floral bloom known to the up-to-date florist.

There are rows on rows of tall palms of every shape and description, beds upon beds of maiden-hair and feathery asparagus fern, suitable for table decoration; and vegetables, whose variety would puzzle the most confirmed vegetable.

Richardson's Orchestra discoursed sweet melodies throughout the afternoon, and the combination of woefully seductive surroundings and musical sounds, was a genuine balm to the mind, a rest-cure I would advise the tired house mother to try.

It is to be hoped that Mr. Ramsay will receive the liberal patronage his enterprise warrants.

Visit the mill that saws and planes out lumber. It will be an "eye opener" to see how perfectly the machinery works, and how exact it makes each one of our
